INTRODUCTION

In publishing this book my object has been to comply with the expressed wish of my grandfather and my father, that there might be a record of their direct line, or family.

In compiling it I have relied entirely upon records as shown in the "Book of Hulls," by Oliver Hull; "Rev. Joseph Hull and Some of His Descendants," by Amy Eleanor E. Hull, and the "Memoranda Concerning the Hulls," by Edgar Hull of Ft. Edward, N. Y., for all previous to my great grandfather, Teddeman Hull Jr.

Commencing with him I have records given me by my grandfather, George, No. 41, which are very complete, as he always took great interest in everything pertaining to his ancestors. I remember distinctly of hearing him and my father talk about them. As an added feature, having in my possession photographs of the entire male line from grandfather down, with two or three exceptions, which I have been unable to obtain, I concluded to include them in the book, believing that it will add great interest, as one can more readily see the class of men we descend from.

The system of numbering is as follows: beginning with Rev. Joseph the names are all numbered consecutively, his oldest child being numbered 2 and so on.

This consecutive number precedes each name, and preceding this consecutive number appears the number of the father of that person, so that each line can be traced back to Joseph 1 by the numbers.

The different families in each generation are separated by a single line across the page.

I have always felt a great interest in the subject, but like most others, have never felt that I had the time necessary to devote to it until recently, and, after several attempts, have finally decided to publish such as I have.

HULLS OF ENGLAND

The first mention which I have been able to discover of the name of "Hull," is in Burke's "Commoners."

I there learn that Hugh Hull, of Hull, in the County of Salop, England, in the time of Edward II., married Elinor, daughter and co-heir of Hugh Wlonkeslowe.

In the reign of Edward III., Agnes, daughter of Edward de Burghton, was married to Hugh de la Hulle de Wlonkeslowe.

A part of the family of the Hulls altered their names to "Hill," whence comes the Hills of "Court of Hill."

The Hulls appear to have spread themselves in various parts of England, and a branch of them settled in Ireland. I have not been able to trace them farther back than the time of Edward II., but if the name was originally spelled "de la Hulle," it is not improbable that they came from the continent, perhaps Normandy, into England.

The following is taken from the "Chronicles of Heraldry," in the New York Society Library:

"Matthew Hull, of Lurcksbere, in the Parish of St. Leonards, County of Cornwell, married Johanna, the daughter of Thomas Yeard of Newtonbushel; and had issue, Thomas, George, Margaret, Ann and Alice. Coat of arms, sable, a chevron between three talbots' heads erased argent.

"John Hull, of Battersey, County of Surry, son and heir of John Hull, of Newport-pagnel, County of Bucks, the son of William Hull, Esq., of Epson, County of North Hampton, Esquires. Sable, a chevron ermine, between three talbots' heads erased argent. This coat of arms was confirmed to the first mentioned John Hull, by Sir William Segar, garter, January 25th, 1624, in the 22nd year of James First. This John Hull died without issue. He had two brothers, Nicholas and Samuel."

"This coat was also granted to John Hull of London, by Sir William Camden, July, 1616."

"About 1640, Sir John Hull of Dunglass, married the widow of John Muir, daughter of James Loch, Esq., of Drylaw, in the County of Edenburg, and treasurer of Edenburg."

The above is taken from the Book of Hulls by Oliver Hull.

MEMORANDA CONCERNING THE HULLS

Nearly two hundred and seventy-five years ago John, George, Joseph, Richard and Robert Hull came to America from England and joined the Massachusetts Colony.

As to John: He probably came to America in the year 1629, as he appeared in Dorchester in 1630, had a share in the division of the Neck Lands or Commons, bought land on the Neponsit river whereon to build a powder mill, was admitted as a freeman at Dorchester in 1632, was deputy to the General Court in 1634, joined the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company in 1638, and was its second sergeant in 1652, and died at Dorchester in 1666, aged 73 years, leaving a widow Margaret, but the names of his children are unknown. He was a blacksmith, and John, the son of his brother Robert of Boston, served his time with him.

See History of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, Mass., and histories of Dorchester.

As to George: He was a surveyor; probably came to America with John; sailed from Plymouth, Devonshire, England, in the ship "Mary and John," settled at Dorchester, had a share in the division of the Neck Lands, was admitted freeman there March 4, 1632, representative to General Court 1634, Assistant Governor of Connecticut in 1637, moved to Windsor in 1636 and soon after to Fairfield, Conn., where he was frequently its representative to General Court, and where he died in 1659, aged about 70 years. His will was admitted to probate October 20th, 1659, wherein he names his two sons, Josiah and Cornelius, both of whom were born in England, and four daughters, Elizabeth, Martha, Mary and Naomi.

See history, entitled "George Hull and his Descendants," published by Clinton T. Hull of San Francisco, Cal.

As to Joseph: He shipped with his family from the harbor of Weymouth, Dorset, for America, and arrived in Boston Harbor May 6, 1635, settled at Weymouth in 1635, removed to and was a magistrate of Hingham in 1638, and then in 1639 founded and settled in Barnstable, Mass.

John, George and Joseph are proven to be brothers by the will of their brother William, who was vicar of Coylton and died childless in 1627. The will was admitted to probate June 19, 1627, and is on file in the office of the Probate Court of Exeter, England.

See Rev. Joseph Hull No. 1.
See Life of Rev. Joseph Hull, written by the late Col. Robert Hull and published by James W. Hull of Pittsfield, Mass., and History of Barnstable families.

As to Robert: He was a blacksmith, came to America with his son John, on the ship "George" from Bristol, England, arriving in Boston Harbor November 7, 1635, and settled in Boston. His name appears frequently in the Probate records of Boston between 1636 and 1656. He was admitted a freeman in 1637, and died in Boston in 1666. His will was dated December 15, 1646, and names his sons, John, Edward, Quincy and Edmond. The Probate records show that all of his sons except John were dead prior to February 12, 1666, at which time John was given power of Attorney to administer his estate, he "then being the only son."

See History of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston and Boston Probate records.

As to Richard: He was a carpenter and planter, was made a freeman in 1634 at Dorchester. He lived in Boston in 1637, moved to New Haven, Conn., in 1639, and was its representative to the General Court and lived there until 1662, when he died, leaving a will which names his sons, Jeremiah and John, and a daughter, Hannah, each of whom left large families of children.

See "Probate Records of New Haven and Descendants of Richard Hull," published by Puella Follette Hull Mason in 1894.
See "Some of the Descendants of Richard Hull," published by the late Samuel C. Clark in 1896.

The history of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company above quoted, and also histories of Dorchester, state that Robert was a brother of John, and consequently a brother of George and Joseph. In Dorchester history also is stated the contents of a letter dated London, June 14th, 1634, written by Edward to his brother John, showing that John was a goldsmith and that he had a brother Richard in England, whom he was trying to induce to go to New England. This is mixed, for while John and Edward, sons of Robert, were brothers, yet they had no brother Richard, and Edward came from England with Rev. John Cotton, arriving at Boston September 4, 1633, the year previous to the date of the letter, and his brother John did not arrive in America until November, 1635.

See New England History and Genealogical Register, Vol. II, page 71, and also both Histories of Dorchester.

The records show John Hull in London in 1393, and again another John 200 years afterwards in 1616. Prior to that time and in the days of Edward II., Hugh Hull of County Salop married Elinor, the daughter of Hugh Wlonkistowe. Andrew Hull was keeper of the King's Privy Seal in 1450. Arnold Hull of London was one of the patentees of the Virginia Charter in 1606. Hugo Hull was a Justice of the King's Bench in 1395. Thomas Hull lived in Derby in 1587.

There was a Henry Hull who had a daughter Alice, the record of whose marriage appears to Rev. John Eedes, one of King James' Biblical translators.

The records of Counties Somerset, Devon and Dorset, which adjoin each other on the Atlantic coast in the southwest part of the English island, and of the inland counties of Salop and Derby, and also of the old County of Middlesex abound with reference to the Hulls in their land and probate records and town registries.

See Book of the Hulls, published by Oliver Hull in 1869. Also notes of Samuel C. Clark, vol. 47, New Eng. Hist. and Geno., Register vol. 47, April, 1893.

Mr. James W. Hull, during his trip to England, became convinced that Thomas Hull was the father of Rev. Joseph, and the notes taken by Col. Robert Hull, while investigating, allude to many more, as likewise do the genealogical indexes and both general and local histories. Just who Isaac Hull, the Baptist preacher, was, who settled in Boston in 1645, or what the history of Samuel Hull, aged 25 years, is, who arrived in 1635, on the ship Elizabeth and Ann, or who was the ancestor of the Richard Hull who settled in Virginia in 1640, or of the Benjamin Hull who settled in New Jersey at about the same time is not yet chronicled, although their descendants in Virginia and New Jersey are very numerous. Certainly the early records give the Hulls and their descendants prominent places. John the mint master, and coiner of the old Pine Tree Shillings, son of Robert, was for seven years from 1671 Captain of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston. Hull street in Boston is named after him, he was selectman, town and county treasurer, was committee and treasurer, Deputy to the General Court, etc., and he seems to have held about all the honors within the gift of Boston. Edward, another of Robert's sons, of Braintree in 1653, was a captain under Underhill in the war against the Dutch. Tristram of Barnstable, son of Rev. Joseph, was a military man in 1634, and a sea captain, who afterwards took a Quaker on his deck and defied the Puritanical edict for his banishment. His son John was also a sea captain in 1687. Richard quit his old home and founded a new one in New Haven, because he chafed under the restraints of the old. Among his descendants appear Col. William, Lieut's. Joseph and Samuel of the Continental Army Gen. William, Capt. Abram, Capt. Elias and Commodore Isaac of the war of 1812, and Commodore Andrew Hull Foote and Gen. Joseph Wheeler of the Civil War. Who was the ancestor of Captain John Hull of the Continental Army referred to in the recently published life of Nathan Hale is not stated. Cornelius and Josiah, the two sons of George, both held military positions in the wars of their day, and their father was one of the Committee which declared war against the Pequoit Indians, and Jedediah of his line was a Lieutenant who stood by the side of Gen. Montgomery when he was killed at Quebec. Benjamin, the son of Rev. Joseph, moved to Maine and was Captain of a Cavalry Company during the Indian Wars. Follow the list of the olden days and the number who have served as soldiers, as Deputies, as Magistrates, as selectmen, as founders of towns and churches, etc., is surprising. From two then small states alone (Massachusetts and Connecticut), nearly a hundred enlisted in the Continental army. The records of all the wars show at the lowest estimate over a thousand of them in service. Their sons and daughters have intermarried with the sons and daughters of other families until the blood flows in the veins of a host. For instance, Josiah, son of George, in 1641, married into the Loomis family, and Prof. Loomis of Yale College, in his book, traces over 1,100 descendants, and he did not include them all. Mrs Puella Follett Hull Mason in her book and supplement of descendants of Richard, enumerates at least a thousand, and she did not include therein the descendants of the eight children of Jeremiah, the son of Richard, who probably would equal in number as many more. Oliver Hull, in his book of the descendants of Tristram Hull, the son of Joseph, enumerates at least 400 or 500, which today does not comprise half the number. John, the son of Robert, had a daughter Hannah, who married Chief Justice Samuel Sewall, of their 14 children six lived to maturity, and their descendants are not enumerated. Benjamin, the son of Rev. Joseph, the ancestor of the New Hampshire Hulls, left a large family of children, and no one has listed all their descendants. Clinton T. Hull, a veteran of the civil war, and a descendant of George, already has the names of over two thousand of his descendants. It is safe to say that in this country today there are over three thousand descendants of George, and nearly an equal number of each of the other three. No enumeration exists of the descendants of the original John or of three of the sons of Robert, to-wit: Edmund, Quincy and Edward, or of those recently discovered by Mrs. Mason, to-wit: Jeremiah, Hannah, Mary, John, Elizabeth, Joseph, Sarah and Martha, children of Jeremiah of New Haven, and grandchildren of Richard.

The published genealogies omit the ancestors of George A. Hull of Newton, Mass., a descendant of Richard through Benjamin, his grandson, four succeeding Johns, one Eliakim and George, who held the second highest political office in Massachusetts. None of the genealogies include Cornelius Hull who lived in Great Barrington, Mass., from 1765 to about 1820, who married Thankful, a daughter of Capt. Hewitt Root and had eight children, to-wit: Pomroy, Stephen, Daniel, Josiah, Rhoda, Mercy, Speedy and Sally.

As one considers this subject many errors of omission and commission are apparent, which can easily be corrected now, as nearly three score of experts have been investigating, each of whom possesses connecting links of value to the other.

JOHN PORTER Deputy
Clerk to EDW:
THOROUGHGOOD

The Hull family are recorded in the Heralds Distinctions of Devonshire, but the original name, De La Hulle, in Shropshire, in the reign of Edward II., indicates that they went from the Continent to England, probably from Normandy. Shortly after the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth, five brothers came to Massachusetts from England: John, George, Richard, Joseph and Robert.

From Todd's "History of Redding."

A sixth brother, William, was Vicar of Colyton, in Devon 1611; died without issue, 1627.

From Pamphlet of Late Col. Robert Hull.

Copy of a letter from the Dean of Oxford to Miss Caroline T. Hull.

Christ Church, Oxford, February 28, 1995.

DEAR MADAM: It appears that Joseph Hull was matriculated as a member of St. Mary's Hall on May 22, 1612, at the age of 17; that he became a B. A. on Nov. 14, 1614, and that he was rector of Northleigh, Devon, in 1621.

Faithfully Yours,
FRANCIS PAGET,
March 8, 1898.

ARTHUR BURCH,
Registrar and Bishop's
Secretary.

DEAR MADAME:

The Bishop of Exeter has asked me to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 24 February and to reply to it. The Rev. Joseph Hull, B. A., about whom you are inquiring, appears to have been instituted on the 4th of April, 1621, to the Rectory of Northleigh on the presentation of Thomas Hull, of Crewkerne, in the county of Somerset, Yeoman. He appears to have held the living until the year 1632, when he resigned it, as his successor, John Ford, was instituted 1632 to the Rectory of Northleigh, vacant by the resignation of Joseph Hull.

ARTHUR BURCH.

Copy of letter to Miss Hull.

FIRST GENERATION

1 Joseph Hull, (Wife Agnes—do not know what her maiden name was), was born in 1595 and became a B. A. at Oxford when only 19 years old. In 1621 he was instituted Rector of Northleigh, which is described by Mr. Hull, of Pittsfield, Mass., as a small church probably as early as the 14th century, with finely carved pew-ends, the same as used in 1621-31. A most complete history of this eminent clergyman's life in America has been given by the late Col. Rob't H. Hull, of New York, and printed by permission for Mr. Hull, of Pittsfield. To this I am indebted for much of the following sketch, or rather for confirmation of data I had already gathered.

Why Mr. Hull resigned his living and came to America is not known. Some have thought that the Calvinistic tendency of those times was responsible for pointing out to him a country where rules and regulations were not so strictly followed, and where one was free to think as one chose. But his entire after life and conduct proves this to be an error, through his devotion to the strictest tenets of the Church of England. At any rate, he voluntarily resigned his living in 1632, and three years after, with his second wife, seven children and three servants, and a company of persons he had collected, chiefly in Devon and Somersetshire, he set sail for the New World.

This company of adventurers, numbering 106 people, is known in New England history as Hull's Colony.

They arrived in Boston Harbor the early part of May, and went at once to the oldest town on the Harbor, Wassaguscus, which they afterwards called Weymouth, doubtless for that port from which they had watched the receding shores of England, many of them for the last time. They have been known for many years as the first settlers of that town, but modern research has shown that this belief originated in the fact that the little settlement was only incorporated after their arrival, and that there were already emigrants before them, who doubtless gladly welcomed this inroad of travelers from the old world, and listened with pleasure to their news of friends across the sea.

Three, perhaps more, ministers had already served at Wassaguscus, but Rev. Mr. Hull was the first legally authorized to preach in the new incorporated town of Weymouth. I have not space to tell of the religious contentions, and the political strife, going hand-in-hand, always in those unsettled times, which made our clergyman's bed by no means one of roses in this small New England settlement, for I must hasten on to those that come after him. Suffice it to say that he left, rather, was driven away from Weymouth, in the course of a year and took his family to Hingham, the adjoining town, which he represented in '38 and '39. He also served on many important committees, and was one of the local magistrates in '38. Nor did his work stop here, for in '39 he founded Barnstable; was afterward minister at the Isle of Shoals, York,

Oyster Bay, and again at the Isle of Shoals, where, in the 71st year of his age he laid his whitened head down to sleep for the last time, and woke, we must believe, if a long life of well-doing counts for aught, in that fair country, old yet ever new, where the "wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest."

The above was taken from the book by Amy Eleanor E. Hull, "Rev. Joseph Hull and Some of His Descendants."

According to the list of his family and people who came over with him he had seven children, viz., Jane, Joseph, Tristram, Elizabeth, Temperance, Grissell and Dorothy.

SECOND GENERATION

1-2 Tristram Hull, the second son of Joseph Hull, was born in 1623 and died in 1666. We have no record of whom he married, but do know that her given name was Blanche.

He settled at Barnstable, Mass. He was a Sea-Captain, a profession in the early colonial days by no means holding the same social status that it does in these.

None of our ancestors came over for amusement. They all had to work, and many gentlemen's sons preferred a venturesome life at sea, and to be in touch with the old world, than one which bound them continuously at home.

Thus one constantly finds in the earlier records of our new country a Sea-Captain bearing a name already historic in the old. It was only natural for Tristram Hull living on the seacoast and being of a daring nature to choose this career. He was also greatly respected in the town, for he was chosen Selectman, a position in those days of much importance, says Munroe, in his history of Bristol, and served on numerous committees being empowered to buy land for the improvement of the town, from the Indians, etc., etc.

Captain Hull was a "chip of the old block," and cared for neither King nor Kaiser when either interfered with that which he wanted to do. Col. Hull in his pamphlet gives an interesting account of the manner in which Tristram relieved the necessities of an old church-member who had been fined and banished for "raising his voice" against Quaker persecution, and picking him up bodily, carried him off in his ship as far as Sandwich, on the Cape, in direct violation of the law and contempt of the magistrates.

When Capt. Hull died he left, besides two fine ships, land, etc., what was considered a large fortune for those days, say the records, L.1150, S. 5., P. 2.

From "Rev. Joseph Hull and Some of His Descendants," by Amy Eleanor E. Hull.

THIRD GENERATION

2-3 Mary, born September 1645.

2-4 Sarah, born March 1648.

2-5 Joseph, born June 1652. Married Experience Harper, and settled in Kingston, Rhode Island, in October 1676. They had a son Tristram Hull, born in October 1677, who married Elizabeth Dyer, of Newport, R. I., at the Friends Meeting House in Newport, on December 19th, 1698. Elizabeth Dyer was the daughter of Charles Dyer, who was the son of William and Mary Dyer. Mary Dyer was a Quaker Preacher, and was hanged on Boston Commons, March 1660, for preaching the Gospel as she understood it, in Boston and vicinity.

2-6 John, born March 1654. He joined the Society of Friends or Quakers; was a Sea-Captain, and sailed a ship between New-Port, R. I., and London, Eng. He married Alice Teddeman, at Horselydown, in Southwark, Eng., on October 23rd, 1684. The following is a copy of the marriage certificate, written upon parchment, as copied from the "Book of Hulls," by Oliver Hull, N. Y.

"John Hull, of Olaves, Southwark, mariner, son of Tristram Hull, of Barnstable, in Plymouth Colony, in New England, Mariner, deceased, and Alice Teddeman, of Magdalens, Barmansey, Southwark, daughter of Edmon Teddeman, of same place, mariner, Having declared their intentions of taking each other in marriage before several Publick Meetings of the people of God, called Quakers, in London, according to the good order used amongst them, whose Proceedings therein, after a deliberate Consideration thereof, were approved by said Meetings; they appeared clear of all others, and having Consent of Parties and Relatives concerned. Now these are to certifie All whome it may concern, That for the full accomplishing of their said intentions, this Twenty third day of the Eighth Month, called October, in the year according to the English account, One Thousand, Six Hundred, Eighty and ffour, They the said John Hull and Alice Teddeman appeared in a publick Assembly of the aforesaid People, and others, met together for that end and purpose, in their public Meeting-place at Horsley-down, in Southwark, London, and (according to the Example of the Holy Men of God, recorded in the Scriptures of truth) in solemn manner, he the said John Hull, taking the said Alice Teddeman by the hand, did openly declare as followeth, Friends and people, I desire you take notice, that in the ffear of the Lord and the presance of this assembly, I take this, my dear ffriend, Alice Teddeman, to be my wife, promising to be to her a ffaithful and Loving husband till death shall separate us.

"And then and there in said Assembly, the said Alice Teddeman did in like manner declare as followeth, ffriends, in the ffear of the Lord and before you in this Assembly, I take this ffriend, John Hull, to be my Husband, solemnly promising through ye Lord to be to him a faithful and loving wife till death shall separate us. And the said John Hull and Alice Teddeman as a further confirmation thereof, did then and there to these presents set their hands. And we whose Names are hereunto subscribed, being present among others, at the solemnizing of the said Marriage and subscription, in manner aforesaid, as Witnesses thereunto, have also to these Presents subscribed our Names, the day and year above written."

In 1687 he removed from London, Eng., with his wife Alice and infant daughter Mary, to Rhode-Island. After residing a few years in the town of New-Port, he built himself a house on the north end of the Island of Cannonicut, now called Jamestown, where his son John was born, being the first white child born on the Island. This house was burned by the British during the Revolutionary war. At the time Captain Hull settled on the Island the Indians still dwelt there. They were very friendly to the white settlers, especially with the Quakers.

Where Captain Hull lived is still known as the "Old Hull Place;" and near by is a Swamp called "Hull's Swamp." During the War of the Revolution this Swamp became a convenient retreat to Persons opposed to the English Colonial Government, and also as a secret deposit for valuables, to prevent their being carried off by the foraging parties and marauders from the English ships. It was much larger then, but the British cut down the trees and burnt the bushes.

Charles Wager, who afterwards became Sir Charles Wager, an Admiral in the British Navy, and privy Counsellor ot Queen Ann, was bound apprentice, when a boy, to Captain Hull. It was with Captain Hull that he learned that nautical skill, as well as that rigid integrity and upright honor which made his name deservedly famous. It is related of young Wager, that when Captain Hull said to him, "Step on board, Charles; perhaps thee may get to be a Captain, one of these days;" he replied, with much spirit, "If I do not get to be an Admiral, I shall be disappointed."

The circumstance of his running his master's vessel over a Privateer, first recommended him to an advantageous place in the British Navy. The facts of this encounter as near as can be ascertained are: The privateer was a small schooner full of men, and was about boarding the ship of Captain Hull, whose religious scruples prevented him taking any measures of a hostile nature. After much persuasion from young Wager, who thought he "could get rid of them," the peaceable Captain retired to his cabin, and gave the command of his ship to his apprentice. His anxiety, however, induced him to look out from the companionway and give directions to the boy, who, he perceived, designed to run over the privateer, saying to him, "Charles, if thee intends to run over that schooner, thee must put the helm a little more to the starboard." The ship passed directly over the schooner, which instantly sank with every soul on board. When Captain Hull's ship arrived in London Wager was sent for and offered a situation in the Navy. He rose steadily and attained the highest honors of his situation. The Admiral, in after life, took every occasion to show his respect for his former master. On one occasion, when the Admiral was in New-Port, Captain Hull called at the coffee house to see his former apprentice, and seeing a Lieutenant, asked him "Where is Charles?" at which the Lieutenant was offended and threatened to chastise the old Quaker "for his insolence, in not speaking more respectfully of his Admiral." When Wager heard of it, he took occasion to reprove the Lieutenant before Captain Hull, saying, "Captain Hull, sir, is my honored master."

In order to express his grateful remembrance of Captain Hull the Admiral sent him annually a pipe of wine.

Captain Hull was a man of the strictest integrity, and of the highest moral character. He died at his house on Cannonicut on the first of December, 1732. His wife continued to reside in the same Mansion until her death, which occurred on October 24th, 1734, aged 75 years. The record of the Monthly Meeting of the society of Friends (or Quakers) says: "She was born in old England, and had no relation in this country." She had the reputation of being a lady of great dignity and amiability of character, readily securing the respect of all those who associated with her. It was said by one of the Officers, who were in the habit of visiting Captain Hull when their ships were at New-Port, that "Mrs. Hull would present an Orange or an apple with more politeness and obliging dignity than most others would present a crown."

He was an Elder of the religious Society of "Friends or Quakers," in the City of New York; and was one of the leading members of that Society, who in May 1777, waited on Governor Tryon, at the Governor's request, and received his proposition that their Society should furnish the Troops with stockings, mittens, &c. He was also one who signed a "representation of Friends to the Commandant, respecting their being charged with the City Watch." This representation states that the number of Males in their Society, of a suitable age for that duty, did not exceed fifty eight. They also urge their peaceable principles and religious scruples in regard "even to bodily defense" as a reason why the duty should not be confided to them only; but expressed their willingness to watch in common with their fellow citizens. There were many prisoners during the revolutionary war captured and taken to New York, and thrown into prison, and the records shows that both Oliver Hull and his wife labored incessantly furnishing them food, and taking care of the sick.

The blacks were by promptness and energy, put down and secured, though not without the loss of several lives. Captain Fowler abandoned that trade after that voyage.

They lived at Stanford several years when they moved to New York, where they lived until 1791, when they moved back onto a farm two miles south of Stanfordville, remaining there until 1801, when he purchased a Store in Hudson City, N. He remained in business there until 1805, when he purchased a "Lot" containing 500 acres of land, in what was then the town of Fabius, Onondaga County, but now the town of Truxton, Cortland County, N. Y., two miles west of DeRuyter. His son George and James Dorwood (a millwright) took a large load of merchandise and went out to take possession of the land. He returned to Hudson in the Fall to spend the winter, and in May, 1806, returned to the farm with his family. In 1808 a man came and showed a better title to the land. He, however, after a time made a settlement with the claimant, and rebought a part of it. He lived on the farm until his death, which occurred on the 3rd of May, 1826. He married Melle Mitchell for his second wife, by whom he had no issue. She died January 11th, 1879, both were buried in the Friends burying ground at Quaker Basin, two miles east of DeRuyter, Madison County, N. Y. A Memorandum written by him after he was Ninety Years old as to the prominent events in his life is as follows:

"I suppose that I was born at Stanford, Dutchess Co., N. Y. When quite young my father moved to New York City where I remember having the Small Pox. In a few years we moved back to Stanford and went on to a farm two miles south of Stanfordville, while there the Friends boarding School at Nine Partners was started and I was sent there two or three winters, summers being employed upon the farm. When I was 13 years old, our family moved to Hudson, Columbia County, there we had a large store.

"When I was sixteen years old I went on horseback north to Peru, Crossing Lake Champlain in the autumn, and whilst there I went to Plattsburgh, and on to Grand Island, Canada. I stayed all winter at my Uncle Stephen Kees's, and in the spring returned to Hudson on horseback; it was said that I had traveled over 300 miles, a long distance for a small boy all alone. "In 1803-4 I 'tended' a wool carding Machine at Kinderhook, during the summers, and in the winters worked in the store at Hudson. Two weeks after my marriage, September 5, 1805, we started for the wilds of the western country with James Dorwood and my father who had purchased a 'lot' containing 640 acres of land in what was then known as the town of Fabius, Onondaga County, N. Y. Our route lay up the river to Albany, Schenectady, thence up the Mohawk River to Utica, Verona, Petersborough, Cazenovia and DeRuyter, thence two miles west to our land. We were a week on the route, bad roads, some new roads. A few log houses only, no frame ones in DeRuyter. On our land was an old log house in which Dorwood and myself remained for the winter of 1805-6. He to repair an old mill, and I to run the store, (we having brought a large load of merchants goods with us) build an ashery, and make potash. We boarded with honest Ashbell Webster some two hundred rods away. But it was a lonesome era for me until the latter part of the winter, when my cousin Edward Hull came from Dutchess County and stayed until spring, when we returned to Hudson by the Catskill Turnpike and Mountains on horseback. An affectionate meeting took place which can never be forgotten while life lasts. We soon made ready and myself and wife, and her mother and sister, started for the far western wilds, and arrived there safe, although somewhat fatigued from the journey. But only think what a trial for the females, separated from many near and dear relatives and friends, and a city life, good dwellings and many luxuries, to the wilds of the distant new country: a poor old log house not closed enough to keep the storms out, a few stones laid up against the side for a fireplace and chimney. However, there was no complaint, ambition and hope being the incentive to action. This all failed, for after two years and a half of unnecessary labor, we were deprived of all our land by a person appearing and showing a better title to it. Therefore we had to give possession losing not only our labor and improvements but something over $2,500, which we had paid, which discouraged us very much, so it was that we removed back to Hudson in the Spring of 1808. I moved to Standford, Dutchess County, and joined Edward Hull, Caleb Barton and Nathan Smith in making paper. I stayed with them until 1811, when I hired a paper mill and a saw mill in Kinderhook at the Falls, ten miles north of Hudson. I stayed there four years or until 1815. I paid $1.00 a day rent and was doing very well. My father had moved up west, before I left there, he had repurchased a part of the same 'lot' of land that we lost (2/3 of it). After being there six or seven years he was taken sick with a long fever and became ever after unable to work or do any business. He had not paid anything towards the land and would lose their home if I did not take it again. This then was a hard trial to myself and good wife to move from all her relatives back to that new country again: there was no way but to do so in order to save a home for my parents, brothers and sisters. So I gave up my good prospects and moved back to the farm in Onondaga County. I went to work and cleared up the land, took away the old mill and built a new one, and also a new saw mill. Then I bought wheat, floured it, and took it to Albany; found it did not pay, so kept the mill for custom work. Commenced making Cast Iron Plows, being the first made in this part of the country; I built two dwelling houses, a large barn, a shop for Black smithing and making the woodwork of the Plows, which burned down, I built another, and several mill-dams.

"I was elected Assessor of the township 6 or 7 years, and Supervisor one year."

He sold his farm in 1853, and moved to De-Ruyter, residing there until 1883, when he moved to Oak Park, Illinois, living with his daughter Anna M. Morey until his death, which occurred Aug. 2nd, 1885, at the remarkable age of 99 years and 2 months. He was a man of the strictest integrity and uprightness of character, honored by all who knew him. He possessed all of his faculties to a remarkable degree up to his last illness. He was buried at Lombard, Illinois, by the side of his son Edward H. Hull.

The following copied from the Records of Du Page County, speaks for itself:

"A meeting of the bar of Du Page County was held at the Court House in Wheaton on Monday, March 26, 1894, for the purpose of taking action upon the death of Franklin Hull; Hon. Judge George W. Brown was chosen chairman, and Judge John C. Batten clerk of the meeting. On motion of L. C. Cooper, the chair appointed a committee consisting of L. C. Cooper, John H. Batten and H. H. Goodrich to draft suitable resolutions to be submitted to the meeting. The said committee presented a set of resolutions on the death of Franklin Hull to the meeting, which on motion were unanimously adopted.

"They were as follows:

"Whereas, death has suddenly taken from our midst Franklin Hull, one of our best known and most highly respected of public officers; and

"Whereas, we feel that it is just and right that we, the members of the Du Page County bar, who have known him so long and so intimately as clerk and deputy clerk of our Circuit Court, and as Recorder and as deputy Recorder of Deeds, should publicly and in a lasting manner give expression to those feelings of respect and love towards him which animates our hearts. Therefore, be it

"Resolved, that in the death of Franklin Hull the people of Du Page County are called upon to mourn the loss of one of its best known and most highly respected citizens, and one of its most faithful, efficient and obliging officers; a man, who during a public experience extending over a quarter of a century, proved himself true to every trust, courteous and obliging to every citizen and faithful to every obligation; a man, the record of whose public services is more eloquent in his behalf and speaks more to his praise than can any words of eulogy. He served his country; he served his county and he served his city well.

"Resolved, that our deepest sympathy be extended to the family in these sad hours of bereavement; and

"Resolved, that copies of these resolutions be presented by appropriate committees to the family of the deceased, and to the Board of Supervisors, that they may be spread upon the records of the County; and we respectfully request the press of the County to publish them.

"On motion the chairman appointed John H. Batten, L. C. Cooper and H. H. Goodrich a committee to present a copy of the resolutions on the death of Franklin Hull to the Board of Supervisors of Du Page County at their next meeting.

"On motion it was voted that as many members of the bar as could do so, attend the funeral of Franklin Hull in a body.

"Geo. W. Brown, Chairman.

"Attest, John H. Batten, Clerk."

He remained there one year, returning to DeRuyter in Sept. 1856, and attended the Academy at that place until the following spring. June 1858 he went to Babcock's Grove (now Lombard), Du Page County, Ill. Arriving there June 17, 1858, he was employed in the general mercantile business until 1862, when he formed a partnership with his brother George Henry. They conducted the business there until the fall of 1865, when they went to Boone, Iowa, and conducted a packing house during the winter. In the spring of 1866 he returned to Lombard, Ill., and took charge of his dry goods establishment which he had owned for some time previously. In the winter of 1868 he sold his interest in the mercantile business, and in company with his brother Delos Hull moved onto a farm at Lombard, and went into the Dairy business, remaining there until the spring of 1871. Machine Company, Chicago, remaining with them until Dec. 2, 1876, when he was appointed Deputy Recorder of Du Page County under his brother Franklin Hull, serving as Deputy four years. He also held the office of Alderman in the city of Wheaton six terms, from 1882 to 1892; was chairman of the Republican County Central Committee from 1888 to 1892; was elected Supervisor of the township of Milton, Du Page County, April, 1896, for two terms of four years; he was a member of the board of education at Wheaton for fourteen years, besides holding numerous other places of trust. He established the Du Page County Abstract Office, associating his son, De Witt Clinton Hull, in partnership with him in that business, Sept., 1889, the firm still being T. M. & D. C. Hull. He was re-elected Clerk of Circuit Court and Recorder Nov. 1900, and has held the office until the present time. He is known as a man of strict probity and uprightness of character, doing thoroughly and well all business entrusted to his care, having the respect and confidence of the entire community.

49-68 DeWitt, born at La Fayette, Onondaga Co., N. Y., April 12th, 1842. He was educated at De-Ruyter Seminary. He enlisted July 1863, in 15th Regiment, N. Y. Vol. Cavalry, Co. his discharge, and died at DeRuyter Sept. 2nd, 1865, aged 23 years and 4 months.

49-69 DeLos, born at La Fayette, Onondaga Co., N. Y., April 12th, 1842. His parents moved to DeRuyter, N. Y., when he was 6 years old, where he resided until he was 16 years old, attending the public schools, and one year at the Seminary there. June 17th, 1858, he went to Babcock's Grove, Illinois, his father having gone there the fall of 1857. The Town is now called Lombard, Ill. It is 20 miles west of Chicago. He lived there two years, attended the public school in the winter and worked for his Uncle Joseph B. in Store in the summer, taught school the winters of 1860 and 1861, in April 1861 went to Chicago and kept books for C. H. Meech, in a Steam Laundry, located in Clark St. on the ground upon which the new Post Office stands. He worked there until September 7th, 1861, when he enlisted in Co. H, 8th Regiment Illinois Vol. Cav. of which the noted Abolitionist and member of Congress, John F. Farnesworth was Colonel. The Regt. was mustered into the United States service Sept. 18th, 1861, at St. Charles, Illinois. Was ordered to Washington, D. C., in October 1861, and always served in the Army of the Potomac. Jan. 1st, 1863, he re-enlisted for 3 years or during the war, and remained in service until August 15th, 1865.

The Regiment was noted as being one of the best in the service. It was in nearly every engagement that the Army of the Potomac had, and many of the skirmishes.

He was at the battle of Williamsburg, at Yorktown, Chickahominy Ridge, at the battle of the Seven Oaks, Malvern Hill, second battle of Bull Run, Fredericksburg, Warrenton, Catletts Station, Culpepper, Cedar Mountain, Rapid Ann, Va., Frederick, Md., South Mountain, Boonesboro, Antietam, Gettysburg, and Upperville, Barbees Cross Roads, and many other engagements and skirmishes. He was hit with a spent ball at Boonesboro, Md., but fortunately it was stopped by a memorandum book in his pocket that probably saved his life.

In April 1865, after the Assassination of Lincoln, the Regt. was sent down the Maryland shore to prevent Booth from crossing the Potomac, but was too late. Booth and companion had pushed off from the Maryland shore as the detail arrived and there was no boat that they could get to follow him.

The Brigade remained with headquarters at Port Tobaco, Md., for about one month, during which time he was detailed as Brigade Post Master, which necessitated his going to Washington by boat, daily after the mail. The Regiment was sent to St. Louis, Mo., and there found orders to proceed to Ft. Riley, Kansas, but the men refused to go, as the war had been declared over, and they had enlisted for "three years or during the war." The officers were anxious to stay but the men held a meeting, appointed a committee to go to Washington and see the Secretary of War. He ordered the Regiment mustered out. There was great rejoicing on the return of the Committee with the muster-out order.

On his return to Lombard, Ill., he worked for his brother Thomas M. in his store at that place during the winter, in the spring of 1866 he took a position with the American Express Co., Chicago. In Sept. 1866, he went to Lockport, N. Y., in the office of his Uncle Daniel A. VanValkenburgh, a large Lumber and Ship Plank Manufacturer. He remained there two years, when he returned to Chicago, and December 31st, 1868, was married to Amelia Elizabeth Whaples, daughter of Reuben and Margaret Jane (Spitzer) Whaples of Oak Park, Ill. In January 1869, he and his brother Thomas M. went onto a farm at Lombard, Ill. In April 1870 he gave up farming and took a position as assistant Book-Keeper for the Weed Sewing Machine Co. In July 1869 was made manager of the Chicago City business, and in Sept. went to St. Paul, Minn., as Manager for that state. Returned to Chicago in Jan. 1873 and was made Special Agent for the whole northwest, remaining with them until Nov. 1877. Dec. 1st, 1877, took a position with Charles P. Kellogg & Co, Chicago, Manufacturers of Clothing, as Salesman, remained with them until May 31st, 1889, when he was appointed Post Master at Oak Park, Ill., by President Harrison.

Upon the election of Cleveland as President he purchased the Coal business of Johnston & Co. at Oak Park, Ill., taking possession April 12th, 1893, on his 51st anniversary and is still in that business. He was mainly instrumental in organizing the Oak Park Business Men's Association, and served as its President for 3 years. He was one of the organizers of the Retail Coal Dealers' Association of Illinois and Wisconsin, and served as its President 2½ years, being one of its board of Directors for 4 years, was one of the organizers of the National Council of State and Inter-State Retail Coal Associations and was its President 3 years. In 1903 he commenced the publishing of the "Retail Coalman," the official organ of all the coal associations in the U. S. and it now stands at the head of all the Coal Trade Papers in the country.

He is a member of the First Congregational Church, at Oak Park, Ill., and one of the board of trustees; is a member of the Oak Park Club, the Grand Army of the Republic, and Royal League, and Masonic Order.
